

/LOCAL NEWS

Frank's, Ford settle dispute

APR 19, 2009

1 MIN READ

A lawsuit that Uniontown-based Frank's Auto Supermarket filed against Ford Motor Co. last month has been dismissed because they settled the matter out of court. The auto supply company claimed that they've been using the catchphrase "We Speak Car" since 2003. The suit alleged that a Ford advertising campaign that started in early March uses the phrase to promote its 2010 Ford Fusion and Fusion hybrid cars. In an order Friday, U.S. District Judge Arthur J. Schwab closed the case. The order notes that the parties "agreed to an amicable resolution of this matter."

The order did not include what the resolution entailed, but noted Schwab will retain jurisdiction if either side fails to execute the settlement agreement.

Frank's Auto, which has sold automobile parts since 1938, has seven locations in Pennsylvania, including the original store on Beeson Boulevard in Uniontown.

The suit had claimed that the retailer has been using the "We Speak Car" slogan in its own ads for six years, and that Ford's use of the catchphrase could harm its business.

The suit had asked a judge to order that all of Ford's literature and advertising with the slogan on it be destroyed.

LATEST NEWS

Gaussa's clutch hit puts Bentworth in WPIAL title game

Running on fumes: Weary Mikes fall to Bishop Canevin in semifinals, 7-1

Greene County father who buried daughter in shallow hole pleads guilty for assault

Pittsburgh area sets record for tornadoes in May

ARTICLE TAGS

Local News

